ABSTRACT

This report presents a statistical description of the 3,613 releases to the street from the Massachusetts Department of Correction (DOC) during 1993. This report also presents information on trends among releases over the last six years. Highlights from this report include the following:

The number of persons released by the DOC has fluctuated over the 1988-1993 period, with the number of releases peaking in 1990. The 3,613 releases in 1993 represent a six percent increase from the 3,410 releases in 1992, but a six percent decline from the number of releases in 1990.

The number of males released during 1993 increased by seven percent from 1992 representing a peak in the number of males released during the 1988-1993 period.

The number of women released in 1993 increased by three percent from 1992. However, over the 1990-1993 period, there has been a downward trend in the number of females released by the DOC, peaking in 1989 (N= 1,031) and declining by 29% by 1993.

In 1993, the fraction of releases who were paroled reached a low of 39%, a significant decline from 1990 where 57% of all releases were paroled and 1991 where parole constituted 48% of all releases.

Overall, 53% of releases were from maximum or medium security facilities and 47% were from lower security facilities. Many of the releases from secure facilities were females serving county sentences or male parole violators. Among females, of the 729 released in 1993, 568 (78%) were released from medium security.

The average time served by persons released to the street in 1993 varied tremendously by committing institution. Persons serving Cedar Junction sentences served an average of 51 months, while persons serving Concord sentences were released after an average time served of 38 months. The average time served for Framingham sentences was about one year (11 months).

INTRODUCTION

This report is a statistical description of releases to the street from facilities of the Massachusetts Department of Correction during 1993. The tables which follow contain information on the nature of the present offense, personal background characteristics, criminal history, and release characteristics for these individuals. The information contained in these tables was derived from the computerized inmate database and was produced on the Department of Correction VAX Computer. Information is also reported on trends in the release population over the last six years, 1988 to 1993.

Only those individuals who were released to the street by the authority of the Parole Board, by expiration of sentence, or by a certificate of discharge are included in this report. Individuals who were released to another correctional authority or to another sentence are not included. Individuals who were released by any means other than parole, discharge or expiration (such as releases by court order, death, or escape) are not included in the report. Individuals transferred to other correctional authorities to serve their sentences who were subsequently released are also not included in the report. However, individuals transferred from other authorities who were subsequently released from a DOC facility are included in the report. Finally, individuals who were released more than once during 1993 are counted as separate cases.

The reader should note that the number in the unknown category is relatively high for certain variables, specifically certain social background and criminal history variables. In the text of this report, percentages are based on the number of cases for which the information for the social background or criminal history variable is known. In the tables following, (Tables 7-43) the percentages are based on the total number of cases, including those cases with unknown information.

RELEASES FROM THE DOC, 1988 TO 1993

We will now turn to a more descriptive discussion of releases from Department of Correction facilities. Table 1 provides a trend analysis on the security level of the releasing institution, type of sentence, type of release, and the average time served, by gender, from 1988 to 1993. Tables 2 through 6 and accompanying graphs provide more specific information on 1993 releases, including personal background and criminal history data.

1988-1993

male and female releases for the years 1988 to 1993. The number of male releases increased each year from 1988 to 1990, decreased in 1991 and then increased again during the 1992-1993 period. The number of female releases increased between 1988 and 1989, declined during the years 1990-1992, and increased slightly in 1993. The 1993 figure for male releases is fourteen percent higher than the number during 1988 (2,530). However, the 1993 figure for female releases is twenty percent lower than the number during 1988 (916).

During 1993, there were 3,613 releases from Department of Correction facilities. Of these, 2,884 were males and 729 were females. The 3,613 releases in 1993 represent a six percent increase from the 3,410 releases in 1992, and a five percent increase from the 3,446 releases that occurred in 1988. Figure 1 shows the trend in the number of

Institution Released From

Over the 1988-1993 period, the proportion of males who were released from maximum or medium security facilities has ranged from a low of 41% in 1991 to a high of 48% in 1988 and 1992.

Table 2 (and Figure 2) show the distribution of male and female releases by the releasing institution

Releases by and by its corresponding security level. For male releases, 46% were released from maximum or medium security facilities and 54% were released from lower security facilities. Among female releases, 78% occurred from medium security in 1993. This figure remains in the range established during the 1988-1992 period (76% to 82%).

Type of Sentence

Most males released from the DOC during the six year period were serving state prison or reformatory sentences. (See Table 1). The proportion of males released from the DOC who were serving county sentences peaked in 1988 and has steadily decreased since then, reaching a low of eleven percent in 1992. Most females released from the DOC were serving county sentences. The proportion of females who were released from state prison or reformatory sentences varied from 12% to 21% during the 1988-1991 time period. In 1992 and 1993, this proportion increased to approximately one-fourth of all releases.

Table 3 shows the distribution of male and female releases by sentence type in 1993. For females, 74% of the releases from the DOC during 1993 were releases from county sentences (which are typically sentences of less than 2.6 years), 15 percent were releases from state prison sentences, and 11% were releases from reformatory sentences. In contrast, 13% of all male releases from the DOC during 1993 were releases from county sentences, 59% were releases from state prison sentences, and 28% were releases from reformatory sentences.

Type of Release

During 1993, 39 percent of all releases to the street were by parole, however, this varied substantially by gender. Table 4 and Figure 3 show the distribution of male and female releases by type of release. Among males, nearly half (40%) were paroled to the street and among females, approximately one-third were released to parole in 1993. For both males and females, the proportion of releases by parole are lower than the corresponding proportions for any year since 1988. For females, 66 percent of all releases were by expiration of sentence or discharge, while 60 percent of males were released by good conduct discharge or expiration of sentence.

Time Served

The average time served is strongly related to the institution to which the individual was committed. Compared to 1992 figures, the average time served among those released in 1993 increased for Concord and Framingham commitments but declined for Cedar Junction commitments. Among 1993 releases, the average time served for a Cedar Junction sentence was 50.5 months, the average time served for a Concord sentence was 38.3 months and the average time served for those committed to Framingham was 11.2 months. The data in Table 1 show that time served for Cedar Junction sentences has fluctuated between 48.6 months and 58.5 months. The average time served for 1993 releases (50.5 months), is lower than the 1992 figure, but remains in the range for this six year period. For Concord sentences, average time served has fluctuated between 19.1 months and 38.3 months during this time period, with the 1993 time served figure being the highest for this six year period. Time served for Framingham sentences has fluctuated from a low of 6.0 months in 1988 to a high of 11.2 months in 1993.

Data presented in Table 5 show the average time served until first release to the street in 1993 by committing institution and offense category. As the data show, time served also varies by offense category. For example, males released from Cedar Junction sentences served longest for sex offenses (72 months) and shortest for

Parole Violator Status and Split Sentences Among 1993 Male Releases

Table 6 shows the parole violator status and split sentence status distributions for male releases from higher and lower security facilities. Here we note that the security level of the releasing institution is often related to the individual's parole violator status. Parole violators make up a larger proportion of releases from secure facilities than they do of releases from lower security facilities. Frequently parole violators return to custody for a short duration and in many circumstances the brevity of their incarceration impedes their transfer to lower security. Of the 1,292 male releases from secure facilities, 447, (35%) were parole violators, while of the 1,592 male releases from lower security facilities, 248 (15%) were parole violators.

NATURE OF PRESENT OFFENSE AMONG ALL 1993 RELEASES

The remainder of this discussion is based on data found in Tables 7-43 following in the back of this report.

Sentencing Court and Committing Institution

Of the 3,613 persons who were released to the street in 1993, one-fifth were sentenced by Suffolk county courts, 16% by Middlesex courts, 12% by Hampden courts and 13% by Worcester county courts. About 11% of 1993 releases were received by the DOC from other jurisdictions, and fifty-seven persons were serving from and after sentences.

Committing Institution

Approximately half of the 1993 releases were Cedar Junction commitments. Concord commitments represented an additional 21% of all releases and Framingham commitments represented 20% of all releases. There were 406 individuals released who were originally committed to another jurisdiction. Most of these were women serving county sentences or county commitments to Longwood Treatment Center for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of liquor.

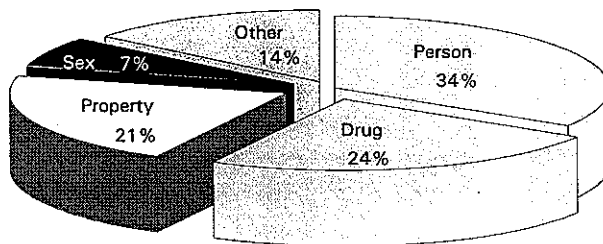

Figure 5.
Present Offense
Category

Present Offense and Jail Credits

Forty-one percent of the individuals released in 1993 were serving sentences for violent offenses (34% for person offenses and 7% for sex offenses), 21% were serving sentences for property offenses, 24% for drug offenses, and 14% for "other" offenses. Fourteen individuals who were serving sentences for Second Degree Murder were released in 1993 and five persons who were incarcerated for First Degree Murder were released in 1993 following a commutation by the governor.

The majority (60%) of the releases spent time in jail prior to their commitment, usually while awaiting trial.

PERSONAL BACKGROUND CHARACTERISTICS

Gender and Race/Ethnic Origin

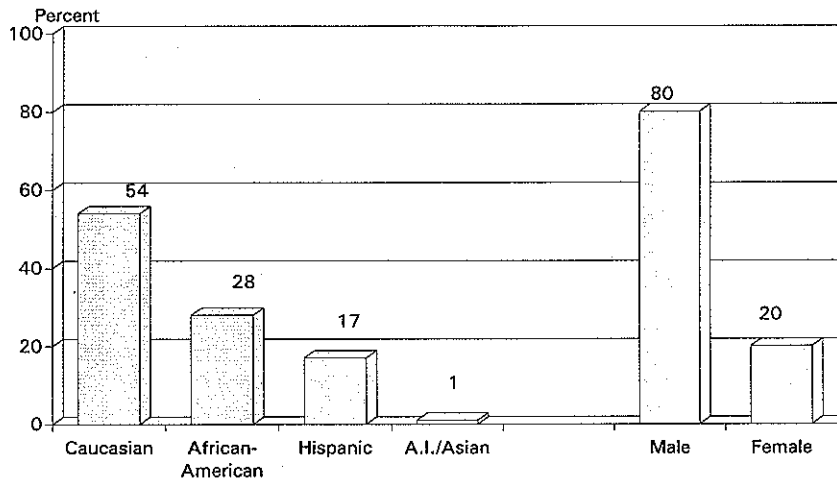

Figure 6.
Gender and Race/
Ethnic Origin

When we look at demographic data for persons released to the street in 1993, we find that 80% of all releases were male, and 20 percent were female. Slightly more than half (54%) of releases were Caucasian, 28% were African American, and 17% were identified as Hispanic. There were nine Native Americans and fifteen Asians in the release group.

Age

Among persons released in 1993, their median age at time of incarceration was 27 years, while the median age at time of release was 31. The youngest person to be released in 1993 was 17 years of age, while the oldest was 75 years old.

Years of Schooling

The median level of educational attainment at the time of commitment for 1993 releases was twelfth grade. More specifically, eleven percent had achieved less than a ninth grade education, and 38% had achieved nine to eleven years of schooling. Among those with some post-secondary schooling, nine percent had completed 13 to 15 years, and two percent had completed sixteen or more years.

Other Social Characteristics

The DOC also collects data on the inmates' marital status and their address prior to incarceration. The majority of releases (69%) were single at the time of their commitment and 16% were married. The largest group of releases (44%) came from the Boston Metropolitan Statistical Area, and 12% were from the Springfield MSA.

CRIMINAL HISTORY

Prior Court Appearances/Incarcerations

The median age at first court appearance was 18 years. The median number of court appearances prior to the current commitment was four. A majority of the releases had previously appeared in court for person offenses (59%), property offenses (63%) and narcotics offenses (41%). A minority had appeared in court for sex offenses (11%), alcohol offenses (24%) and escape charges (6%).

Thirty-seven percent of the 1993 releases had one or more prior incarcerations in a county house of correction, and nine percent had prior incarcerations in a state or federal correctional institution. Overall, 40 percent of the releases had served some time in an adult correctional facility for a prior commitment.

*The median age at first court appearance was eighteen.
The median number of court appearances prior to current commitment was four.*
